It is high time B-Schools build sensitivity among students. This generation is over exposed, so we have to move beyond books and teach them ground realities of our societies. It's not the information and theory that B-School have to offer today. It's the application which B-School has to teach. Management is an applied science, it's not laboratory-based learning

Dr Vishnuprasad Nagadevara
Dean, Woxen School of Business, Hyderabad

Most B-Schools in India don't insist on the experience. Most of them are very happy to take in freshers. Even the IIM's do that. More focus is on the theoretical information. As a result of which, sometimes the students are unable to relate to practical information
